NATURE NOTES

Fall is on it's way! We hope you are enjoying the days of summer before the Harvest Moon waxes full.

The cranes are flying overhead, strengthening their wings for their annual winter migration to the Gulf Coast. Young cranes will accompany their parents on the migration, although you may have trouble telling which are the adults. The baby chicks we spotted in the spring have grown into their eight- foot wingspans.

Be on the lookout for woolly bears as the temperatures start to drop. Also known as Hedgehog Caterpillar, because it curls into a ball and "plays dead" when disturbed, these fuzzy insects are fun to watch. Legend says they can predict if there is a mild or harsh winter ahead. Have fun researching the various versions of the predictions!
